Reproduction of an 18th century French Jean Bart Pirate pistol

In combat, by pirates or corrsaries, these weapons were generally used for a single shot, since the reloading method was very slow and it was generally not time to reload during the action. As a result the fighters after firing were forced to draw their saber or sword or to use the pistol as a baton.

Relive this fantastic era with the historical reproduction of this DENIX pistol, the adventures and misadventures of pirates and corsairs in the Caribbean seas!
