Reproduction of the 1868 two-barrel pistol, in metal and wood, with a loading and firing mechanism/simulator.

This pistol with two cut-out barrels is the result of shortening the rifle, used by Wyatt Earp, to make it lighter and more manageable. Wyatt Earp (1848-1929) was a US Marshall very famous for his extreme severity towards outlaws. His most famous feat was the shooting at OK Corral (Tombstone, Arizona) against a band of bandits.

Recreate an American western shootout with the historical reproduction of this DENIX pistol, a weapon highly appreciated by historical recreationists and weapons collectors.
