Reproduction of the German army and police pistol between 1908 and 1945.

The Luger P08, also known as the Parabellum, is an iconic semi-automatic pistol designed by German engineer Georg Luger in 1898. Adopted by the German Army in 1908, it saw extensive use during both world wars. The P08 stands out for its unique toggle locking mechanism and careful ergonomics, offering great precision and reliability. Chambered mainly in 9mm Parabellum caliber, it remains a historic symbol of German gunsmithing engineering.
