Ergonomics designed for control

The hollowed-out central section design promotes a natural and comfortable grip. In practice, this geometry improves replica control during rapid movements or target transitions. The slim profile also provides a more modern and fluid feel during use.

Lightweight skeletonized structure

The lightweight construction significantly reduces the weight on the front of the platform. This more balanced distribution improves overall handling and reduces fatigue during long gaming sessions. Despite this weight saving, the entire assembly maintains good rigidity thanks to its precise machining.

Versatile M-LOK compatibility

The integrated M-LOK system allows for the installation of numerous compatible accessories such as grips, tactical lights, and various mounts. This modularity offers a high degree of customization to suit the player's style or preferences.

Full Picatinny Rail

The full-length Picatinny top rail facilitates the mounting of optics, folding sights, or tactical accessories. This configuration ensures excellent continuity for modern setups focused on performance and ergonomics.

Free float design

The free-float system reduces stress on the barrel and helps maintain better overall stability. This type of design is particularly appreciated by platforms seeking greater consistency and a more reliable shooting feel.

A modern tactical style

With its angular lines and modern machining, this handguard instantly gives the platform a more aggressive and contemporary look. It's exactly the kind of upgrade that visually transforms a setup while genuinely improving its usability.
