A historical replica with a unique character

Inspired by the submachine guns used by German forces during World War II, the Lancer Tactical M40P AEG WWII offers immediate immersion. Its iconic design, combined with a black and bakelite-like finish, faithfully reproduces the appearance of historical weapons while benefiting from the convenience of modern electric mechanics.

Metal construction for added realism

The robust feel provided by its upper body and metal stock is immediately apparent. This design gives it a realistic weight in the hand while enhancing the replica's durability during regular use. The imitation wood elements also contribute to the visual authenticity sought by military history enthusiasts.

Compact folding stock

The folding metal stock significantly reduces bulk during transport. In practice, this configuration facilitates carrying and improves maneuverability in confined spaces while maintaining good stability when deployed.

Performance adapted for airsoft games

Thanks to its electric AEG propulsion and adjustable Hop-Up , this replica delivers an optimized trajectory for medium-range engagements. The selector allows you to choose between semi-automatic and automatic fire depending on the player's needs.
